

A VLSI contact formation process in which a nitride layer is used to stop a wet oxide etch. An anisotropic plasma etch is used to cut a substantially vertical contact hole through the nitride and underlying layers. Thus, the resulting contact hole has a "Y"-shaped profile.

93-C-77